I. Background:

High opportunity neighborhoods are defined by a variety of factors including low unemployment, better performing schools, lower crime and greater availability of quality, affordable housing stock. Children growing up in high opportunity neighborhoods generally have better opportunities for upward economic mobility, as well as better health outcomes and higher educational attainment. In Hartford, low-income, people of color are disproportionately facing the challenges of living in low opportunity neighborhoods which contributes to negative long-term educational, economic and health outcomes.

Through its strategic plan focused on reducing racial, geographic, and income disparities, the Hartford Foundation seeks to increase the numbers of current Hartford residents living in higher opportunity neighborhoods. The Foundation believes this must be achieved both by increasing the opportunity level of Hartford neighborhoods through increased investment, and by increasing the agency of Hartford residents to choose to move to other higher opportunity areas throughout the Greater Hartford region.

According to a 2015 federal study of 21 states, Connecticut had the second highest concentration of affordable housing in high-poverty neighborhoods, behind only Mississippi<sup>1</sup>. Most affordable housing in the region is concentrated in the City of Hartford with relatively little affordable housing existing in the surrounding towns. While 38% of the housing stock in Hartford is affordable housing, 22 towns in the Foundation's 29-town funding region have less than 10%.<sup>2</sup> Statewide, 73% of Blacks and Latinos live in low and very low opportunity areas compared to 26% of Whites and 36% of Asians.<sup>3</sup> This segregation of our community by income and race/ethnicity was caused and exacerbated by a wide variety of structural barriers created by our state's history of redlining, as well as currently enforced local zoning codes and other land use laws, government subsidy programs and a variety of other factors.

Furthermore, as reflected in the Commission in Equity and Opportunity's Reentry Working Group report, people of color are still disproportionately incarcerated relative to whites in Connecticut. As a result of this and ongoing discrimination in housing and employment, people of color in Connecticut experience high rates of homelessness and housing instability<sup>4</sup>.

II. Proposal Requirements:

Grants will fund activities to take place for up to one year, with a potential focus on the Winter/Spring 2022 legislative session. Grants may support advocacy around a variety of housing issues facing residents of color and low-income residents including, but not limited to, housing segregation, housing choice, housing quality, housing stability, reentry housing and pathways to more inclusive housing development. These efforts may include administrative lobbying, state- or municipal-level legislative and/or grassroots lobbying, as defined by Connecticut law. These efforts may also include resident and/or policymaker education through the creation of materials, forums, videos, etc. The Foundation does not support or oppose candidates for public office or make expenditures related to election ballots.

All proposals will be asked to describe to what extent activities are led/informed by resident voice, as well as the research basis for the proposed policy recommendations. Priority will be given to proposals that promote the leadership and voice of Hartford residents and residents who are persons of color.
